UNDOCUMENTED IMMIGRANT FILMMAKER EXPECTED TO DRAW HUGE CROWDS TO ASIAN FILM FEST'S CLOSING NIGHT AT NEW CENTRAL LIBRARY

(San Diego, CA – October 20, 2013) Hundreds of people are expected to attend the 14th San Diego Asian Film Festival's closing night film, DOCUMENTED, at the New Central Library (330 Park Blvd.) at 7PM Friday November 15, 2013. Director and Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist, Jose Antonio Vargas, is scheduled to attend and is available for interviews starting Thursday, November 14.

Two years ago, Vargas came out as undocumented in the pages of the New York Times Magazine. Since then, he has become a national figure in the immigration reform debate. DOCUMENTED — a captivating look at being American, becoming an activist, and being a son to a mother in the Philippines he hasn't seen in nearly 20 years — is Vargas' film debut. The screening is sponsored by University of San Diego with additional support by the San Diego Miramar College Diversity/International Education Committee.
